

A New Dynamic in Accident Prevention & Teen Driving

Accident Prevention / Avoidance Training for Teen Drivers

A Proactive Approach to teen driving safety.

Since the beginning of drivers' education decades ago, the majority of a teen's driver education has been on safe and basic operation of the vehicle to get a license. Very little time was spent on emergency operation.

If a teen driver was lucky enough to get into a class that teaches defensive driving skills and maneuvers it was a onetime event that taught great skills but there was no practice or reinforcement after that—since a lot of those skills that were learned can't be practiced on the street. At least not legally or safely.

Now –what if I told you that in 2 or 3 lessons, we could teach your young driver things it may have taken you years to learn (if you have learned them yet) that could:

- 1. Decrease their chance of having an accident
 - 2. Make them more attentive behind the wheel
 - 3. Make their driving less stressful
- And
- 4. They can practice and reinforce these skills every time they drive.

Just like in any safety training, martial arts or sports competition there are things that can be done prior to an accident, fight, or game that can allow a bad event to be minimized or avoided, an opponent defeated or a team to win. In a lot of cases avoidance can be a key to not getting hurt or hit and the same can be used while driving so as to prevent an accident or minimize the damage.

Even though we call them accidents—the large majority are avoidable. Hence the proactive skills we teach in observation and scanning, what to look for to avoid risks, avoidance of high risk driving scenarios and basic safety operation all work together to make them a safer driver by working to better control their environment. And they can practice these few easy skills every time they get behind the wheel.

If your teen's car is not there when the other guy wants to have an accident—your teen is safe. Just as if your teen doesn't put his car in a position to cause an accident—no accident occurs.

That's what we will teach them. The who, what, when, where and why of driving. Who to look for, what may happen, when can it happen, where will it most likely happen and why they don't want to be there. Then we teach them how to position their car in traffic to be able to avoid bad drivers or bad driving and what cues to look for to avoid at risk drivers. We also cover personal safety while operating the vehicle and being aware of threats that can occur not related to driving. Finally we cover safety equipment that should be in a car and how to use it.

The Prevention Avoidance Safety System of Training or PASS Training is affordable and easy to schedule for your teen driver.

The cost for a one hour session is $75.00 or three sessions for $195.00

Usually we like to have at least two sessions, one to evaluate and start the training and one to continue and enforce the driving skills and observation techniques. Most people use three sessions and they can also be used by anyone in the family if they want.

The program is designed around and for teens, but adult drivers can also benefit from the training.

We like to see the sessions completed in 2 weeks if possible, so as to keep it fresh. The sessions take approximately one hour. We also provide an electronic training document they can use later for review.

Here's the best part –We come to you. We can meet you and your child, at home, school, anywhere that's convenient for you. Then we go for a drive in their car—since this is what they drive and there is no learning curve for another vehicle. (Parents are more than welcome to come but we find they inhibit real driving sometimes) We plan a one hour route so that we can evaluate your teens driving habits and skills. Then we work on what they need to learn to be better. No harsh words, no boot camp, no stress, just easily digested, workable and tangible exercises and training on observation techniques and driving skills.

It's easy to get started:

1. Call or email us. We will send you the paperwork to get started.
2. Fill out the paperwork and return with payment (we do PayPal, credit card or check)
3. Schedule the sessions. If you schedule and need to cancel for some reason, we ask that you let us know as soon as possible and we can reschedule your session.
4. We show up and you drive.
5. When we are done, we will send you a private written evaluation that you can discuss with your teen driver or just for your information. Everything that we put in the report will have been covered with your teen so there are no secrets.

SRT Group has been doing training for the private sector, police departments, government agencies, businesses and churches for over 12 years. We know how to train people and make them better at the task at hand.
